difficulties - perhaps insuperable - in translating certain words so as to convey the shade of meaning intended by a particular author.

At lunch today with the Times' people, Mr. Heren gave us an account of the Bundestag debate. It is said to be the most violent event held in the Parliament. When Strauss was described as a dangerous man, all CDU members rose from their seats in anger. The Chancellor was sharply attacked, and references were made to the similarity between some CDU policies and those of Hitler.

Tonight I had a dinner for Admiral Conolly, President of Long Island University, who is here in connection with his duties as a member of the President's Board of Consultants on Foreign Intelligence activities. I had as other guests Bill Tyler, Col. Miller (Air Attache), Col. Lassetter (Army Attache), Capt. Scott (Naval Attache), and Henry Pleasants, Lt. Col. Eisenhauer, Major Zimmermann and Claude Martin of OCA.
